last night and brat his horse, or East Fortisth effect. This is the first time Mr. Hyde fine appeared in New York State, of least publicly, since fact July, when the insurance inventigating committee began to send out entreena servera. Mr. Hyde has been in Newport the greater part of the time, although fromently he can up to Boston. He came to town from that city has night

There were no subprena servers waiting for Mr. Hyde at his home. He will not be subpenned by the Armstrong committee, as he has promised to appear before the committee whenever his presence is wanted and tell freely all that he knows about questionable transactions in the Equitable

The committee probably will not call upon Mr. Hyde until next week at the earliest, as it is expected that the affairs of the Mutual Life will engage the committee's time for several days.

Mr. Hyde is a much desired witness Without him there are many things in the Equitable tangle that would never be cleared up. Mr. Hyde is determined, when he appears on the stand, to put himself before the public in as favorable a light as possible and to demonstrate that he is not responsible for many of the irregularities in the Equitable management, blame for which has been laid at his door Mr. Hyde will explain in detail his relations to the $50,000,000 Union Pacific blind pool, and his statements in regard to this transaction are sure to furnish food for thought to both Jacob H. Schiff and Edward H. Harriman.

Mr. Schiff has already declared on the witness stand that he did not know that the Equitable society was a party to this holding agreement; that he understood that the transaction was absolutely with Mr. Hyde in a personal capacity. Mr. Hyde, on the other hand, has said that he is ready to swear that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. knew that the Equitable was a party to the pool, and he has charged Harriman with pool, an 1 he has charged Harriman with having invited him into the pool on behalf of the society. Mr. Hyde will also tell the committee something about the $685,000 blind loan in the Mercantile Trust Company—the Equitable "yellow dog" fund—which has up to this time remained completely in the dark. Mr. Hyde as an officer of the Equitable society indorsed the note which secured this loan.

Not only will Mr. Hyde tell the committee all that he knows, but William H. McIntyre.

Not only will Mr. Byde tell the committee all that he knows, but William H. McIntyre, the Equitable fourth vice-president under the old régime and Mr. Hyde's right hand man in the management of the society's affairs, will soon return to town and appear before the committee.

McIntyre probably knows more about the Equitable's political contributions and the Equitable's political contributions and the moneys paid for "supervising" legislation than any other officer of the old manage-than any other officer of the old management. It has been said that he was practically in charge of the payments from the "yellow dog" fund.

The news that he is to return to town was received by the committee yesterday with satisfaction, for it is thought that now Thomas D. Jordan, who was one of the trustees of the $685,000 fund, and who as yet has not been found by the committee's process servers, also will have to appear. It was argued yesterday that he would hardly desire to stand out alone. President Paul Morton of the Equitable also will be glad to see Mr. Jordan, as Mr. Morton has been looking for him for some time to question him in regard to matters growing out tion him in regard to matters growing out of the Morton examination into Equitable

The inquiry will be resumed this morning The inquiry will be resumed his morning with President McCurdy of the Mutual Life on the stand. Mr. Hughes, counsel for the investigators, will question Mr. McCurdy to-day in regard to his syndicate participations, and in regard to his personal interest in the Mutual's subsidiary companies. This, it was predicted yesterday, would be an interesting and profit table line of inquiry

This, it was predicted yesterday, would be an interesting and profitable line of inquiry in President McCurdy's case. It is doubtful whether the committee's lawyers will be able to finish with the Mutuai's president to-day. If thep are not, he will be put on the stand again Wednesday.

One of the things which President McCurdy will be asked to explain more fully is the Mutuai's relation to the Morristown Trust Company. The committee has heard that the payments which the Mutuai Life made for "confidentiai" legal services were made through the Morristown Trust Company in such a way that the payments appear on the Mutuai's books only as having gone to the trust company. Being a New pany in such a way that the paythents appear on the Mutual's books only as having gone to the trust company. Being a New Jersey institution, the committee, of course, cannot reach the trust company's books. The committee's process servers have been unable to locate A. C. Fields, the Mutual supervisor for New York State, and it looks now as though the inquiry would have to go on this week without Fields. It was said at the Mutual's executive offices yesterday that Fields was on crutches the last time he appeared at the Mutual building, and he surely could not attend the hearings. Mr. Fields, it was said, might let the company know at any time where he was, but the officers did not know at present, although they were certain he was not doughny service of a supbona.

they were certain he was not dodging service of a supported yesterday on good authority that the erganization of one or more stock companies with the avowed purpose of selling insurance at a profit as a strictly business proposition, without any pretence of philanthropy, would be one of the results of the presence inquiry. The president of one insurance company in this city dent of one insurance company in this city said yesterday:

"It is only a question of a short time now when life insurance will be recognized as a when life insurance will be recognized as a business proposition pure and simple. Of course, it is no new thing to have stock companies selling insurance. It was because so many stock companies went to the wall years ago that the mutual plan was tried. But mutuality in a life insurance company is only a theory. In reality the officers run the company just as though it was a stock organization.

HAIR GROWS ON MAN'S TONGUE. Causes Loss of Taste and Ability to Talk Distinctly.

BIDDEFORD, Me., Oct. 16.-Pecause of a growth of fine hair on the end of his tongue Will E. Cleaves, a jeweler of this city, is losing his sense of taste and also his power of speech. The strange case has thus far baffied the local physicians, who say they have never known of a sight case, and do not know how to treat it. Some time are Cleaves discovered a few fine hairs on the end of his tongue, but thought little of it at that time. They continued to grow and increase in number. He soon found that his sense of taste was becoming very deficient, and that all his food tasted alike. He consulted local physicians, who are now making every effort to kill the hair. The hair has reached such a length that Mr. Cleaves is losing his power of speech, not being able to articulate plainly.

BRIDE OF THREE WEEKS SHOT. Husband Held for the Shooting-He Says It Was Aceldental.

Lizzie Christiano, 18 years old, was yesterday afternoon removed from her home, at 302 First street, Brooklyn, to the Sensy Hospital with a pistol bullet in her left breast. Tony Christiano, who married the girl three weeks ago, and since has had several quarrels with her, was arrested on suspicion of having fired the shot. He says the shooting was accidental, the pistol falling from his hand as he was taking it from his pocket. The girl who, the physicians say will recover, refuses to male terms teralgoment of the trame by Prest. dent finet of treasgetown Entressity.

Washington, Oct. 16. President fixed of finorgatown University, in a stroubar of the insceptity, which was brought forth by an apparent mounderstanding of the famility's great order for the purification of athleties at the sollege, declares omchatleaffy that there was no intention on the part of the ecliege authorities to discourage clean amatens contests, and the stand taken was with the object only of barring professionalism and brutality in football and other games.

The order in question not only confined the athletic representatives of the univercity to bone fide students, but turned over to the student body the entire management of athletic offsire. Only an intimate understanding of the dangers which beact ollege athletics," says the circular, "can make clear how important such a policy is. A most pernicions principle at the present time guides and directs athletics in American institutions of learning. It that detestable doctrine, so often falsely attributed to the moralists of the Society of Jesus, that 'the end justifies the means.

The end in question is to be victorious in athletic contests, and any means that lead to this end are to be adopted. In other words, that all is fair in college ath-This is seen in its most shocking form in the present system of playing football. The American college game of football is, when played strictly according to the rules, a strenuous and rough contest Bones may be broken, serious strains sus tained, and the bodily stamina severely But in addition to this there is system of football tactics in vogue among some of our oldest and most influential universities which can only excite horror and reprobation among honorable gentle-

"Some of the oldest and most respected football coaches instruct their teams to injure the most capable players on the opposing teams so that they cannot continue to play. This is a fact well known to the inner circles of football coaches and players and can easily be substantiated by giving names, dates and places. Some instances which have come to the writer's personal knowledge from praiseworthy eye witnesses may be added.

The circular goes on to relate, without giving names, three or four instances where players have been deliberately and brutally injured so as to put them out of the game, and continues:

"During the present season one member of the Georgetown eleven has been bitten in the car and another in the breast. The game as thus played to-day is fit only for thugs. Its ethics are more destestable than those of the prizering, where it is not allowed to strike below the belt, and the contest is between man and man; it is not permissible to strike a man when down.

"The ethics of football tactics, as taught by some of the best coaches, are to strike in the most vulnerable parts of the body, to use as many men as possible to strike the man singled out for injury, to strike and foully injure the man when he is down and pinioned to the earth by those who have thrown themselves on him. Only young men of brutal instincts can force themselves to such conduct. Hence, as recently stated in an editorial of a well known Washington paper, in every college in the country men are bired for tuition, board, lodging or other compensation to play on the various football teams."

VERSES WON HER A HUSBAND. "Germantown Poetess of Passion" to Wed Rich Farmer Who Read Her Lines.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16 .- After reading a poem by Miss Laura M. Ford, who has been dubbed by her friends "The Germantown Poetess of Passion," W. Foster Smith, a gentleman farmer of Bucks county, Pa., fell in love with the authoress. As a result the pair will be married on October 28.

The poem that incited Dan Cupid to pick Mr. Smith as a victim was entitled "To a Farmer." The final stanza reads:

a Farmer." The final stanza rea
Hol ye farmers, hearken, hearken,
Woulds: a thrifty helpmeet woo!
Listen, then, for here's a maiden
You may win if you will sue.
She is fair and bright and ruddy.
Like a rose in summer time,
She has known full thirty summers,
But her charms are in their prime.
She has yirtues rare and many,
She has graces rich and sweet,
Anti you ne'er would want another
Once this maiden you should meet.
From reading that, far, Mr, Smith

And you never would want another Once this malden you should meet.

Upon reading that far, Mr. Smith laid down his paper. His eyes stared through the window out upon his broad estates, but he saw neither the window nor the estates. Mr. Smith was meditating.

"Here am I," he thought, "a middle-aged Scotchman, with a scientific education and money. I have retired to spend the rest of my days in peace and comfort, and I have no wife. I need a wife. I've been forced to admit that to myself for a long time. Here's a girl who can write fine poetry and she wants to marry a man just like me. She says she's pretty and attractive. I wonder if she can cook?"

Mr. Smith picked up the Farm Journal again and read the second stanza. It answered his question as tersely as though the writer had been there and had overheard his remarks.

She can cook the choicest vlands.

She can cook the choicest viands.
Bake the lightest bread and cake;
Finest coffee, jams and jellies,
Ples and puddings she can make.
She can fashion neatest garments,
Missing buttons know no place.
For her deft and nimble fingers
Never leave of these a trace.

"That's fine," said Mr. Smith to himself.
"But maybe she wouldn't have me." He was inclined to feel very much cast down about this, but when he read the last few lines of the last verse, his doubts were dispelled

You have purse strings rather lengthy, Which would open at her will. Then, good farmer, you think, doubtless, You're the one to fill the bill. You're the one to fill the bill.

"By George," exclaimed Mr. Smith, slapping his knee. "I'll do it," and he sat down at his desk and dashed off a note to Miss Laura M. Ford, the poetess.

It isn't necessary to recount all the details of the romance that followed.
